192
193 Comments:

- 194 • T Horman said that the original engineers looked at the earthquake fault line and it wasn't an issue.
- 195 • S Bankhead made the disclaimer that they do their best to be prepared but can't control mother nature.
- 196 • R Stapley brought up the power line easement. He was concerned about the home being built too close
197 to the wires. S Bankhead said to contact Rocky Mountain Power and connect her in the emails to make 198 sure they are in the range they are supposed to be without being too close to the power lines.
- 199 • Being cautious when it comes to sensitive areas like a landslide area was brought up and discussed.
- 200 • R Stapley went over sprinkler systems and water pressure.
- 201 • S Bankhead said that the landslide area needed further analysis. She added the condition that the 202 engineer will have to address the potential landslide.

203
204 Motion that in addition to the conditions that were listed in the staff report we will receive something from the
205 design engineer that addresses the landslide and mitigation strategies for that and also are included on emails
206 to the Rocky Mountain Power representatives so that we make sure that the home is placed in accordance with 207 their easement as well. The motion would be to approve this with those two conditions. If for some reason you

208 have to make some adjustments to the site plan, then we would have to come back and look at those 209 adjustments. We hope everything is done the way it is supposed to and we are just being overly cautious right
210 now so you won't have to make any changes. Get verification from both of these places and we will be good to 211 go. — R. Stapley, second — M. Pierce
